Thanks for Checking Out Hunger!

Throughout the year, area grocery chains host “check out” campaigns to raise funds for Second Harvest. The programs all have different names including “Check Out Hunger,” “Fight Hunger,” or “Bag Hunger,” but all have the same general concept. Customers are given the opportunity to add a certain amount of money, usually $1, $3, or $5, to their grocery bill. That money is then donated to the Food Bank. Some stores, like Weis Markets, also collect food during this time.

We would like to thank all of the stores and their customers for making this year’s campaigns successful yet again. While we were still waiting on final totals when this issue went to print, we can report that your efforts have raised over $120,000 for Second Harvest; an incredibly significant contribution to our fight to end hunger and we could not have done it without you. THANK YOU!!

Weis Markets recently presented Second Harvest with $40,000 in store gift cards to be used for our Backpack Buddies and Cooking Matters programs. The money was raised through the chain’s “Fight Hunger” campaign held in the fall.
Starting Our Own Food Revolution
By Ann McManus

Have you ever had a fresh apple? What a silly question, and yet, many children who live in our service area may not have access to fresh fruits and vegetables. This is especially true if they live in the inner cities where food shopping opportunities are limited. It’s even more likely if their families rely heavily on the Second Harvest pantry network for the food that they consume.

Jamie Oliver, British chef and food revolutionary, traveled to the US in 2010 to work with children and school meal personnel in Huntington, WV. He found first graders who misidentified common foods like tomatoes, but knew what tomato ketchup is. The puzzled looks on their faces when he showed them potatoes were priceless!

This past summer, the Allentown Health Bureau, with funding from a Community Services Development Grant and private donations, distributed donated fresh fruits and vegetable for several weeks at the city’s playgrounds much to the delight of the playground program participants. Second Harvest will pick up where the green cart left off by offering fresh fruit and vegetables through its member agencies in our six-county service area. To help accomplish this, a new walk-in cooler (see page 2) allows us to accept fresh foods we previously had to refuse.

We also happily accept gardeners’ excess produce. Have more fruit on your trees than your family can consume? Bring it on! It will find a home and will probably be consumed very quickly by a family whose “fruit” would otherwise have been canned applesauce.

And why is this important? Fresh, unprocessed fruits and vegetables contain fiber and other nutrients that may be absent in canned or frozen products. The canned or frozen variations often contain added fat, sweeteners, and sodium not present in fresh from the garden or farm produce.

There is a growing epidemic of obesity and nutrition-related illnesses among all demographics. To us at the food bank, it is important to include fresh foods with our offerings as much as possible in order to fight that increase.

Thanks to the generosity of major donors and supporters like you, we can help level the playing field for vulnerable populations.
Empty ‘No’ Bowls

On Friday, October 28, 2011, volunteers from the 2011 Empty Bowls Event Committee transformed Second Harvest’s warehouse into a beautiful party setting, perfect for our annual fundraiser, Empty Bowls: Hunger in our Neighborhood, scheduled for the next evening.

Mother Nature, however, had a different plan. Committee members and staff awoke Saturday morning to the flurry beginnings of what would become the heaviest October snowfall in the area’s history.

The planned event was canceled, but we would like to thank everyone who supported us by donating items for our silent auction, purchasing tickets to attend, volunteering their time, or just sending in a donation. We know the evening would have been a great success and we could not have done it without your support.

All the silent auction items and decorations have been stored away for the 2012 event which has been scheduled for Saturday, October 6, 2012, from 6:00-9:00 PM with a rain (or snow!) date of Monday, October 8th at the same time. We hope you will be able to join us for the 11th annual Empty Bowls as we commemorate 39 years of fighting hunger!

Make Way for the Fresh Foods!

Recently, we held a ribbon cutting ceremony to introduce our new 4,400 cubic foot walk-in cooler, generously funded by TD Bank and The Century Fund, and we officially launched our Fresh Foods Initiative to bring more fresh fruits and vegetables to our member agencies. To kick off the program we filled the new cooler with a truckload of fresh Pennsylvania produce which was purchased through a grant provided by Hunger-Free Pennsylvania (formerly the Pennsylvania Association of Regional Food Banks) and Walmart.

Dozens of Food Bank supporters crowded into the rear of our warehouse to watch as Stephen Patterson, TD Bank’s Regional Senior Vice President for the Lehigh Valley region, and Pastor Serge Jean-Pierre of the food pantry at Eglise Evangélique de la Renaissance Church, cut the ribbon officially opening the cooler doors for business. The cooler was promptly filled with apples and pears purchased from Bechdolt’s Orchards in Hellertown and potatoes, yams, onions, cabbage, and squash purchased from Kegel’s Produce in Lancaster.

Fresh produce has more nutritional value, but because of a higher cost and shorter shelf life than canned or processed foods, fresh fruits and vegetables are often luxury items for those seeking assistance from local food pantries. Since the cooler’s installation, we have distributed more than 100,000 pounds of fruits and vegetables. Our goal is to make fresh produce more accessible to our member agencies so they can distribute it to area families in need.
Donor Spotlight: Holiday Food and Fund Drives

At Second Harvest, we are fortunate to be surrounded by a community with unwavering support for the work we do. This is evident especially around the holidays when we receive dozens of calls from individuals and organizations interested in planning food and fund drives to benefit those in need. This past holiday season was no different.

In November and December, there were more than 70 documented food drives that were organized by our friends and supporters and we accepted more than $1,000 pounds of food and grocery products as a result. Other organizations stopped by the Food Bank to present us with monetary gifts in honor of clients and customers. Here is a look at some of the groups that joined us in the fight to end hunger this year.

Temple Beth El Chanu-can – Students and staff at Temple Beth El in Allentown recently held a “Chanu-can” event where they built elaborate structures, like a giant dreidel, out of canned goods. The event educated students about Chanukah and hunger in our area. Afterwards, the cans were donated to Second Harvest – 11,991 pounds total!

Employee Incentive Food Drive – H.T. Lyons in Bethlehem collected 1,065 pounds of food and groceries through its first “incentive food drive.” Employees received three raffle tickets for every item donated. The raffle tickets were then used in a Chinese Auction style drawing for prizes including gift certificates, merchandise, and a paid day of vacation!

M&T Bank – Representatives from the M&T Bank Charitable Foundation visited Second Harvest to present us with $10,000 to help alleviate hunger in our area.

National Pierogie Day – Representatives from Mrs. T’s Pierogies stopped by with a check for $1,080 that was raised through the “Serving up Smiles” program at area school districts.

Toyota Tundra Food Drive - Lehigh Valley Toyota Dealers and the Lehigh Valley Iron Pigs "hauled away hunger" when their convoy of Toyota trucks delivered 5,753 pounds of food and groceries to Second Harvest. Representatives from both organizations, including the playful Iron Pigs mascots, helped with the delivery.

Fitzpatrick Lentz & Bubba

Holiday Donation – In lieu of sending holiday cards to their clients, the attorneys and employees of Fitzpatrick, Lentz, and Bubba, P.C. made a gift of $10,000 to Second Harvest to help us in the fight to end hunger.
